

For example, when the baking powder was mixed with water, the water seem to have fused with the baking powder. When the two substances mixed they creates a white, dry, solid substance.

In addition, when baking powder mixed with vinegar the baking powder dissolves.

After examining, the results were the iodine was red and dissolving.