

What does the Prussian officer want from the two friends?

Reading Check

Identifying Significant Details Why is it important that both men refuse to respond?

Reading Strategy

M. Sauvage fell straight forward, like a log. Morisset, who was taller, tottered, half turned, and fell crosswise on top of his comrade. M. Sauvage gave out twelve shots rang out together.

The twelve shots rang out together.
The officer shouted, "Fire!"
They shook hands, trembling from head to foot with a shudder which they could not control.
He stammered, "Farewell, Monsieur Sauvage."
M. Sauvage answered, "Farewell, Monsieur Morisset."
They stood still a few steps away.

A ray of sunshine made the little heap of still squirming fish gleam. Geons which was lying on the grass a few steps away.

Then Morisset's glance happened to fall on the sack full of gunflakes. And the officer began to give commands. The soldiers raised their rifles. They stood side by side again.

M. Sauvage did not answer. The Prussian drew M. Sauvage aside and put the same question. Morisset answered not a word.

Then he rose suddenly, approached the two Frenchmen, took the password? Your friend won't know. I'll pretend to relent.

Morisset by the arm, dragged him aside, whispered to him, "Quick, then he moved his chair so as not to be near the prisoners and twelve men took their places, twenty paces distant, rifles own language. Then he moved his chair so as not to be near the prisoners and twelve men took their places, twenty paces distant, rifles

The two fishermen stood silent. The German gave orders in his tones?

Mout Valentin kept thundering. Of that river. Within five minutes! You have relatives, of course?"

The Prussian quietly went on, stretching out his hand toward the officer went on: "I give you one minute, not two seconds more."

Then he moved his chair so as not to be near the prisoners and twelve men took their places, twenty paces distant, rifles

The two fishermen stood motionless, mouths shut.

The secret will disappear with you. If you refuse, it is immediate death. Choose."

The officer went on: "No one will ever know. You will go back trembling shook their hands.

"But—since you came out past the outposts you have, of course,

"As far as I am concerned, you are two spies sent to keep an eye on me. I catch you and I shoot you. You were pretending to fish in order to conceal your business. You have fallen into my hands, so much the worse for you. War is like that.

see that it didn't go badly. But we have to talk about another little matter. Listen to me and don't get excited.

which he had carefully brought along. The Prussian smiled: "Ah! I

The German gave more orders.

face up, as the blood spurted from his torn shirt.

The twelve shots rang out together.

The officer shouted, "Fire!"

They shook hands, trembling from head to foot with a shudder which they could not control.

He stammered, "Farewell, Monsieur Sauvage."

M. Sauvage answered, "Farewell, Monsieur Morisset."

They stood still a few steps away.

And the officer began to give commands. The soldiers raised their rifles.

They stood side by side again.

M. Sauvage did not answer.

The Prussian drew M. Sauvage aside and put the same question.

Morisset answered not a word.

Then he rose suddenly, approached the two Frenchmen, took the password? Your friend won't know. I'll pretend to relent.

Morisset by the arm, dragged him aside, whispered to him, "Quick,

then he moved his chair so as not to be near the prisoners and twelve men took their places, twenty paces distant, rifles

own language. Then he moved his chair so as not to be near the prisoners and twelve men took their places, twenty paces distant, rifles

The two fishermen stood silent. The German gave orders in his tones?

Mout Valentin kept thundering. Of that river. Within five minutes! You have relatives, of course?"

The Prussian quietly went on, stretching out his hand toward the officer went on: "I give you one minute, not two seconds more."

Then he moved his chair so as not to be near the prisoners and twelve men took their places, twenty paces distant, rifles

The two fishermen stood motionless, mouths shut.

The secret will disappear with you. If you refuse, it is immediate death. Choose."

The officer went on: "No one will ever know. You will go back trembling shook their hands.

"But—since you came out past the outposts you have, of course,

"As far as I am concerned, you are two spies sent to keep an eye on me. I catch you and I shoot you. You were pretending to fish in order to conceal your business. You have fallen into my hands, so much the worse for you. War is like that.