Dear Mr. President,

Wearing shiny armor and wielding fierce swords, knights stood out as heroic figures from the past. Today, knights still exist; without wearing armor and riding horses, they are just less noticeable. My sister, Linda, has the same qualities as a knight. She deserves to be knighted for three reasons: her honesty, sense of responsibility, and willingness to volunteer her time to better society.

As stated, my sister is an honest person. She takes an intermediate Spanish class at Henry Ford Community College (HFCC). When her instructor passed back her quiz last week, she noticed her teacher forgot to mark wrong two of her incorrect answers. She brought this to her instructor's attention immediately after class. And yesterday, when she used our mom's car and parked too close to another vehicle in the Kroger parking lot, she scraped the paint on the driver's side door as she got out. Instead of pretending she did not know how the damage happened, she came right home from the store and admitted the mishap to Mom. She believes in always telling the truth.

Besides being honest, Linda is responsible, especially when it concerns her family. In addition to attending several classes at HFCC, she works full-time as a teller at Bank of America. Although she has a busy schedule, she helps to care for our 85-year-old grandmother. She drives our grandmother to her doctor appointments on time and takes her shopping every Sunday after
