The U.S. Supreme Court Justices

The U.S. Supreme Court justices start working at home May 4. The U.S. Supreme Court is the highest court in the U.S. The Supreme Court has nine justices who make decisions about laws and disagreements that people have. Usually the justices work in Washington, D.C., and make decisions together in the Supreme Court building. Now the justices are working at home because of the coronavirus. They are staying home to help stop the spread of the coronavirus. For the first time ever, the justices will talk on phones to make decisions. People can listen to the justices make decisions live online.
